

NAME

Pod::Simple::Debug -- put Pod::Simple into trace/debug mode

SYNOPSIS

use Pod::Simple::Debug (5); # or some integer
```

Or:

my $debuglevel;
use Pod::Simple::Debug ($debuglevel, 0);
...some stuff that uses Pod::Simple to do stuff, but which you don't want debug output from...
```

```
$debug_level = 4;
...some stuff that uses Pod::Simple to do stuff, but which you DO want debug output from...
```

```
$debug_level = 0;
```

DESCRIPTION

This is an internal module for controlling the debug level (a.k.a. trace level) of Pod::Simple. This is of interest only to Pod::Simple developers.

CAVEATS

Note that you should load this module before loading Pod::Simple (or any Pod::Simple-based class). If you try loading Pod::Simple::Debug after &Pod::Simple::DEBUG is already defined, Pod::Simple::Debug will throw a fatal error to the effect that "it's s too late to call Pod::Simple::Debug".

Note that the `use Pod::Simple::Debug ($x, somenum)` mode will make Pod::Simple (et al) run rather slower, since &Pod::Simple::DEBUG won't be a constant sub anymore, and so Pod::Simple (et al) won't compile with constant-folding.

GUTS

Doing this:

```
use Pod::Simple::Debug (5); # or some integer
```

is basically equivalent to:

```
BEGIN { sub Pod::Simple::DEBUG () {5} } # or some integer
use Pod::Simple ();
```

And this:

```
use Pod::Simple::Debug ($debug_level,0); # or some integer
```

is basically equivalent to this:

```
my $debug_level;
BEGIN { $debug_level = 0 }
BEGIN { sub Pod::Simple::DEBUG () { $debug_level }
use Pod::Simple ();
```
